

Nelson Voltaire

Nelson "Piman Bouk" Voltaire migrated to America from Haiti in the late 1970's. A man of faith who is a husband, father, and successful entrepreneur, Piman Bouk is the living embodiment of the American success story. He owned two Restaurants for 14 years, an auto repair shop for 24 years, and owns the well renowned Piman Bouk Bakery. It is undisputed that Piman Bouk is in fact one of the most influential Haitian-American leaders in the United States of America.

For over 30 years, Piman Bouk's radio show has been the primary source of news to Haitian-Americans throughout South Florida and the Caribbean Islands. He can be found in the WLQY 1320am radio station located in the City of North Miami. Through his radio show, Mr. Voltaire encourages North Miami residents to become engaged in local government and to participate in local elections. Moreover, he encourages North Miami residents to proudly embrace their constitutional right to vote with his well-known rallying cry, vote vote vote. The Miami Herald has hailed that Piman Bouk's radio show was "known as the CNN of Haitian radio."

Additionally, through his businesses and radio show, he has donated food to the hungry, donated clothes to the poor, and donated school supplies to elementary school students who were in need. Piman Bouk also provides spiritual guidance to ministers, youth groups, convicted felons, and juvenile delinquents. He also rebuild churches and schools in Haiti and recently opened a medical clinic for the under-served right here in South Florida. A man who has assimilated well in America while never forgetting his Haitian culture, Mr. Voltaire will forever be a beacon of success, prestige, and hope to future immigrants from all over the world seeking to achieve the American dream. Piman Bouk, Power Man!
